the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a vision of a new mental health system, which will be based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.

There is a need to ensure that people with mental health problems are given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.

The aim of this paper is to explore the experiences of people with mental health problems who have participated in decisions about their care.

The paper is structured as follows. First, a brief overview of the current mental health system is given.

Next, the experiences of people with mental health problems who have participated in decisions about their care are explored.

Finally, the implications of the findings for the development of a new mental health system are discussed.

Background

The current mental health system in the UK is based on a model of care which is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.

The aim of this paper is to explore the experiences of people with mental health problems who have participated in decisions about their care.

The paper is structured as follows. First, a brief overview of the current mental health system is given.

Next, the experiences of people with mental health problems who have participated in decisions about their care are explored.

Finally, the implications of the findings for the development of a new mental health system are discussed.

Method

The data for this study were collected as part of a larger study which explored the experiences of people with mental health problems who have participated in decisions about their care.

The study was conducted in a mental health hospital in the south of England. The hospital provides a range of services for people with mental health problems, including inpatient care, day care and community care.

The study was conducted over a period of 12 months. The data were collected through a series of focus group discussions and individual interviews.

The focus group discussions were conducted with groups of people with mental health problems who had participated in decisions about their care. The individual interviews were conducted with people with mental health problems who had participated in decisions about their care.

The data were analysed using a grounded theory approach. This approach involves the development of a theory which is grounded in the data. The theory is developed through a process of constant comparison, in which the data are compared with each other and with the theory.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (13.5% of the population).

There are a number of reasons why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. The life expectancy at birth in the UK is now 77 years for men and 81 years for women (ONS 2002).

Another reason is that people are having children later in life. This means that there are more people in the 65-74 age group than there were in the 1990s.

There are also a number of reasons why the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to increase in the future. One of the main reasons is that people are expected to live even longer.

Use this setting to prevent access to the lock for all clients (card, code, phone and NetCode) in a set time period.

1) Select Day Lock Out.

2) Set the start time and end time for the access to be prevented. Then select which dates of the week this needs to take place.

In this option you can select when you would like the keypad to light up.

None - The keypad will not display any LED lights

Press - The keypad will only light up when a button is pressed.

Locked/Unlocked Status LED

If this option is selected the lock will flash every 5 seconds, red for locked, blue for unlocked.

Note: Synchronise your application to implement your changes, battery life will be reduced if status LED is turned on.

Daylight Saving

Please make sure that Use Recommended Settings is selected in this section.

Note: The only exception to this is if your location does not observe daylight savings.

REM Behaviour

The CL4510 and CL5510 include two connectors called REM ports. The standard behaviour of these ports allows reception desk remote opening (REM 1) and alarm panel trigger opening (REM 2).

These ports have four different modes of operation you can choose from:

- 1) Remote Release - In this mode REM1 is used for standard push-button release. REM2 is intended to be used when the lock needs to be released for a longer period. When a switch or relay connected to REM2 is closed, the lock will open for a period of 30 minutes, after which the lock will revert back to normal operation.
- 2) Sensor Mode - This mode allows two dry contact switches or sensors (door status and latch monitoring) to be connected. Trigger entry will also be added to the audit trail.
- 3) Sensor and Alert - This is a hybrid mode combining the support for a single dry contact switch or sensor (as per sensor mode) and an output. The output can be connected to any compatible device, such as CCTV, with an input that supports the detection of a falling (changing) voltage.
- 4) Unlock and Lock Down - This mode supports the connection of two dry contact switches. Connected to REM1, the switch will unlock the lock for the period set by the standard re-lock delay. Connected to REM2, the switch will trigger lock-down mode (Only the Master and Sub-Master Code will be able to gain access).

If you have changed your mode, remember to synchronise your application.

Turn on this feature to mute the lock. Please note that when this feature is turned on the lock will flash yellow when buttons are pressed.

Note: Synchronise your application to implement the change.

the 1990s, the number of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia has increased in many countries, including the United Kingdom (Murray & Lewis, 1994; Murray & Lewis, 1998).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with schizophrenia. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a number of strategies to improve the lives of people with schizophrenia (WHO, 1993). One of these strategies is to improve the quality of life of people with schizophrenia.

One of the ways in which the quality of life of people with schizophrenia can be improved is by providing them with a range of services and support.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (12% of the population).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. Another is that the public sector has become more efficient. A third is that the public sector has become more attractive to workers. A fourth is that the public sector has become more diverse.

The public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In the 1990s, the public sector accounted for 12% of the UK's GDP. This is up from 10.5% in 1980. The public sector has also become more efficient. In the 1990s, the public sector's productivity grew at a faster rate than the private sector's.

The public sector has also become more attractive to workers. In the 1990s, the public sector's unemployment rate was lower than the private sector's. This is because the public sector has become more diverse. In the 1990s, the public sector employed more women and more people from ethnic minorities.
